From the peppery piece of octopus they put on the complimentary olive platter to the pitchers of sangria flowing red across the dining room, Ole! Tapas Bar bleeds Spanish pride from concept to execution. With its quintessential cuisine for the indecisive -- tapas -- you can get everything from sauteed snow crab cake to grilled eel with layers of pineapple and fried goat cheese with honey, which behaves like stucco against your stomach walls. Tapas range from $6 and $10, but bigger entrees exist, too, such as the duck with sweet potato and pomegranate marinated chicken. Much like the real thing in Madrid, most of the small plates are hit or miss in quality. (Cheer the sauteed artichoke and mushroom, but besmirch the baked omelet.) The good news is that if a dish is lacks the certain flavor you'd expect, the decor does a nice job of compensating. From the burnt orange and brown walls splattered with murals of bullfighting toreadors to bathrooms wallpapered with Spanish newspapers and magazines, there's a design presence worth gawking at from Innovative Creations. Ole even has an all-female valet crew (Valet of The Dolls), who greet with you with a certain flair before you head inside for your shared affair. -- Gregg Rosenzweig
